

CLAIMS

1. An improved furniture conjoinment structure consisting of a table leg fixture assembled to a tabletop, the said table leg fixture utilizing connector blocks and tabletop support members integrated into a quadrangle framework and, 5 furthermore, table legs are attached to the bottom section of the said connector blocks, the main features of which are: an annular groove is centrally disposed in the top end of each said connector block for the placement of a washer, enabling the stable placement of the said tabletop on the said table leg fixture.

2. As mentioned in Claim 1 of the improved furniture conjoinment structure 10 invention herein, the said annular groove and the said washer are directly proportional in shape and, furthermore, the height of the said washer is greater than the depth of the said annular groove.

3. As mentioned in Claim 1 of the improved furniture conjoinment structure invention herein, the said washer is constructed of a pliant rubber/plastic 15 material.